General

How do I create a fat32 parition with Windows XP (fat32format)?

Hello folks,

well as Microsoft has decided to strip fat32 from the formating tool, you do not have much choice to create a fat32 partition anymore. You could use a partition manager, a Linux CD and some others, but nothing comfortable.

Luckily somebody took care of it and wrote a program which does help you in that case.

Attached to this article you will find fat32format which will do the trick:

fat32format e:

will format the drive "e" with fat32.

Unique solution ID: #1024
Author: n/a
Last update: 2007-11-17 13:23